EDITORIAL

Long-Range Planning

At the recent annual Board of Trustees meeting part of the agenda was devoted to a consideration of Long-Range Planning for the development of Northwestern. As a result of the discussions, a continuing study of future needs for the welfare of the College has been implemented by the Board.

In respect to expansion of campus facilities, one of the next major building projects under study is the proposed Science-Mathematics Building. Other campus additions in the future will include a Memorial Chapel and new dormitory facilities.

The innovation of the liberal arts degree will help enrich the curricular offerings. It is projected that the student body will continue to increase in size. The faculty growth, with qualified training, will also increase proportionately.

With the continued growth in all aspects of Northwestern's program, it will be essential to increase the financial support. Within the past five years the operating budget has increased an average of 20% each year or more than 100% since 1960.

The continued loyal assistance, encouragement and support from the church, alumni, and friends of Northwestern are vital. The long-range plans of Northwestern will only be as successful as the degree of loyalty from the constituency of Northwestern. Moreover, the most vital long-range view is that Northwestern must continue to strive to be a truly Christian educational institution.

Nine master prints, five etchings, two lithographs, and three woodcuts have been on display in the Ramaker Library vestibule exhibit case. Master artists such as the German expressionists Max Beckmann and Kaethe Kollwitz, the Spanish romanticist Francisco Goya, the French impressionist Edouard Manet, the French early surrealist Marc Chagall, and the Japanese masters Sharaku and Haronobu are represented by original prints. Also in the show was an original etching by an unknown seventeenth century artist which is the reverse image of a print by the Dutch baroque artist Van Ostade. The prints were on loan for the exhibit from private collections.

The display also contained a Japanese wedding "obi" or sash presented to the Ramaker Library for display by Miss Jeane Noordhoff, retired missionary to Japan and an alumna of the Academy class of 1898.

MUSIC

The choirs of Northwestern combined to present the oratorio "Elijah" on Sunday, February 21, in the College Auditorium. The choirs were directed by Professor Lawrence Van Wyk. Accompanists were Professor Rodney Jiskoot, organ, and Professor Herbert Ritsema, piano.

Dr. James Wood sang the role of Elijah. Dr. Wood is head of the vocal music department and choir director at Morningside College in Sioux City, Iowa. The tenor soloist was Professor Stanley De Fries, head of the Music Department at Sioux Falls College. Judy Gunner-son and Linda Rozeboom, both students at Northwestern, also sang solo parts.

The presentation, given before approximately 1200 people, was a great success in every respect. Many requests have already been made to perform a similar work next year.

The College Choir under the direction of Professor Lawrence Van Wyk visited churches and schools in Iowa, Michigan and Illinois during spring vacation. Their concerts were at Aplington and Wellsburg, Iowa, Grand Rapids, Forest Grove, Overisel, Holland, Spring Lake, and Kalamazoo, Michigan, and Fulton, Illinois. They also sang at Hope College and Western Theological Seminary Chapel services, and in Hamilton (Michigan) High School, where a former choir member is now teaching. Jean Miller, a senior, spoke concerning the college at each concert. Dave Van Engelenhoven served as the choir's business manager. In February the choir gave a thirty-minute concert at the Northwest Iowa Choral Fest at Cherokee before 500 high school musicians. Additional concerts are planned in area churches.

The Concert Band under the direction of Professor Herbert Ritsema performed in January for the Rock Valley and Paullina High Schools.

Professor L. Van Wyk served as guest director at the Palo Alto County Vocal Festival at Ruthven, Iowa. Five schools of the county were represented: Ayrshire, Cylinder, Mallard, West Bend, and Ruthven. Mr. John Juist, a recent graduate of Northwestern, is the vocal director at the Mallard School.

The College Male Quartet, known as "The Westside Four," sang in six Reformed churches in Denver, Colorado, on Sunday, Jan. 31. The next day they appeared in several high schools in the Denver area. In the evening they gave a special presentation at the Denver Christian Endeavor Banquet. The quartet is composed of Nolan Bogaard, William Kalsbeek, Leroy Netten and James Bolluyt. The Rev. Fred Buseman, college pastor, accompanied them to Denver.

Student recitals have filled the college air with music this spring. Harold Schelling, Marvin Boelman and Linda Rozeboom gave a joint organ recital March 7, during which Professor Rodney Jiskoot gave program notes. On March 9 Leland Foreman, tenor, presented a voice recital and on March 16, Noreen De Jager presented her senior voice recital. Gary De Geest, senior, and Harlan Vande Berg, junior, presented a joint voice and trumpet recital on April 6. As part of the Fine Arts Festival Mrs. Erma De Vries presented a program April 20 on the organ featuring Grieg's Piano Concerto and a suite by Debussy. At a date yet to be determined Bob De Young and Judy Vande Berg will give their recitals on the trumpet and piano respectively.

RELIGION

On Ash Wednesday, the Student Christian Fellowship sponsored a Candlelight Communion Service. The participants sat at tables arranged in the form of a cross. The service was conducted by the Rev. Henry Schoon and the elders of the First Reformed Church of Boyden, Iowa.

Other meetings featured Dr.

Wayne Marty, professor of Biology at Westmar College, and the film "Play for Keeps." Dr. Marty's topic was "Think, Man, Think." The film was co-sponsored by the N Club and the S.C.F. It features several members of the "Christian Athletes" organization.

"Words to the Cross" was the theme to a series of meditations given in chapel by the college pastor during Holy Week. Students assisted in the service each day, notably the Chapel Choir, Choral Readers, and a mixed octet. The Rev. Arthur De Hoogh, Northwestern College Field Representative, sang "The Holy City" for one of the services.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

Three Judo experts from Meiji Gakuin University of Tokyo, Japan, were on the campus on April 8 and 9. They appeared in various classes and gave several demonstrations showing the art of self defense. The participants, called the "Aikido" group, are Mr. A. Mitake, Mr. N. Hayashi, and Mr. Y. Arima. Mr. James Welton, Athletic Director, was in charge of their schedule of appearances.

SPEECH

Later in the semester the teams plan to participate in other debate tournaments and in debates with individual area colleges. Their advisor is Professor William G. Lovelady.

Red Raiders win conference; are chosen for NAIA playoff

The Northwestern Red Raiders were the Tri State Conference Champions in basketball, with 11 wins and one loss, the best record for a championship team since the conference began. Their only loss was to Westmar, who finished third.

The Raiders' non-conference opponents proved to be of higher caliber, holding Northwestern to a 6-6 record. The total figure of 17 wins and 7 losses was the second best of any team in Iowa.

Because of their championship and their fine showing against strong opposition, Coach Muyskens' team was chosen for a play-off spot in the post-season tournament of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. The opponent the college hoped for was Central College, but they were beaten in an earlier round by Iowa Wesleyan.

The Wesleyan Tigers were delayed one day because of a snowstorm, but the NAIA playoff was held as an unusual afternoon game March 2, before expectant fans. The crowd was pleased to see the Raiders gain an early lead, but they cooled off to a 37% effort in field goals and 50-43 deficit in the score at half-time.

It became worse after the break as the Tigers piled up an 18-point lead at 63-45, but the remarkable Raiders were not out of the game yet. They tied the score at 73-73 with 7:45 left in the game. It was nip and tuck from that point until the last minute or two, then the Iowa Wesleyan team, with the aid of some accurate free throws, topped the home team 90-82.

Muyskens: "Basketball Coach of the Year"

Paul Muyskens was selected by college coaches in the State of Iowa as "Basketball Coach of the Year" in District 15 (Iowa) of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics. In recognition of this honor the Des Moines Register gave him their salute for the season's best coaching job in Iowa. This year his team had the second best record in Iowa with 17-7.

Dave Korver, Darrell Kreun and Dick Groenhout all scored more than an average of 12 points per game while leading the Northwestern College Red Raiders to their first Tri-State Conference championship.

On top of the scoring heap was Korver, who ran in 366 points in his 24 games for an average of 15.25 per game. Kreun scored an average of 14.08 per game by stuffing in 338 points in 24 games while Groenhout played in 23 games and scored 286 for a 12.43 game average.

Paul Schneider was fourth in the Raider scoring list as he put in 176 points for a game average of 7.65. Following him was Norm Prins with 154 points (6.29) and Dave Kleis with 151 points (6.29).

Completing the list of Red Raider scoring are the following players: Daryl Vaas - 106; Ron Vander Meide - 71; Rick Vande Berg - 57; Erv Mellema - 36; and Owen De Boer - 14.

Kreun was named to the second NAIA basketball squad of District 15 (Iowa). The 5'8" guard from Edgerton, Minnesota, was selected by the coaches and athletic directors of the colleges in the district.

Articles of Lasting Interest

The Dutch Cart Before the Horse Who Fell in the Well

In our January issue we presented in photograph and transcription the two sides of the Dutch master print displayed in the Dutch Heritage Room. It is the print of a woodcut in Ludolphus de Saxony's Life of Christ, a block-book dated in 1495.

With two months to study further the translation of the print from fifteenth century Dutch, we made the embarrassing discovery that we had transliterated consecutively first the illustrated side and then the side with a full page of text. However, the full text side is clearly entitled "Dat lxxvi Capittel," so it is the preceding page to the story of the man with dropsy. It is at the end of this earlier story that the moral is attached.

The text of this story is based on Luke 11:37-54, freely expanded. The moral makes allusion to Colossians 3:5-8. The scriptural story of the man with dropsy is in Luke 14:1-6.

The following translation was made by Mrs. Nella Kennedy (the wife of Prof. Bill Kennedy) and her sister Miss Lineke Breugem. They permitted the editor to intrude some of his suggested changes.

THE 76th CHAPTER

..... build coffins for the prophets already slain (who have been slain by your fathers) and this out of pretense and hypocrisy, for the favor of the common people. But since they wanted to kill Christ the Lord of the prophets they showed abundantly therewith that they followed their ancestors in wickedness. Thus did Jesus say to them: I will send to you prophets and writers and some of these shall you kill and persecute so that on you will come all the blood which has been shed by prophets and saints from the beginning of the world — that is from the blood of Abel to the blood of Zechariah, who was slain between the altar and the temple (i.e., both altars). Thus I tell you, this blood will be required of this generation. Therefore woe unto you, you learned men of the law, who have taken the keys of wisdom, i.e., have taken the power to explain the scriptures, and you are not aware of the right way in declaring the scriptures; you have not explained the scriptures and prophecies to the people rightly. And when the scribes and Pharisees heard all this, they began to rebuke the blessed Jesus for his words and gave him many severe words to destroy his teachings, thinking to frighten and to alarm him with that, so that, making him angry, they would draw words out of his mouth, with which they could catch him and accuse him.

THE MORAL

These chidings of the Pharisees for their outward purity and inward impurity, the teacher Beda says, are against those who classify sins such as unchastity, robbery and other like trespasses as particularly bad, but they classify those despised sins of the spirit, which the holy apostle does not love but condemns, as small and too slight to notice. These are such as bitterness, anger, unworthiness, cursing, blasphemy, evil desire and avarice, which idolatry. Further we are admonished not to covet any high position in government or honor of the world. Therefore let us say with the prophets that our only honor lies in approaching God like this: Not to us, Lord, not to us, but to thy holy name give glory. Grant, Lord Jesus Christ, grant me that I may be spiritually dipped and washed by confession for the spiritual meal, i.e., for the receiving of the holy sacraments, so that I may be saved from the persistent accusations of the enemy by thy protection. Help me to scorn all hypocrisy and pretense, all evil desire and avarice. And grant that I may not sin against thee nor against my neighbor by pretending to be perfect, by pretending to be peculiar, by presuming an unjust judgment, or by wicked denials, so that I may not share vanities with the Pharisees, but on the contrary, that I may come through thee, who art the way; that I may come to thee, with thy truth leading me; that I may comt for mercy to thee, who art the life. Amen.

Concerning the Man with Dropsy And Concerning the Meekness and Compassion Shown by Jesus Eating with the Pharisees and Teaching Them.

The 77th Chapter

After this the blessed Jesus was preaching in the cities of the land of Galilee. And it happened in those days that he was eating with one of the princes of the Pharisees one sabbath day. And those Pharisees were waiting to see what he would do. And there came a man with dropsy, or dropsical, who stood before them, neither saying anything nor speaking. The blessed Jesus, seeing the man in front of him and knowing that it was his desire to be made whole again, spoke to the Pharisees and masters of the law, sitting with him at the table, and asked them if it would be lawful to heal a man on the sabbath, and they were silent and did not give a reply to Jesus. The blessed Jesus, seeing this, touched the sick man and made him whole again and let him go. And thus Jesus answered their thoughts, because they believed that it was unseemly to happen on a feastday, and this he showed by means of an example of animals, asking this: Who of you would not pull out his ass or ox which had fallen into the well? and shall . . . ?

"Congressman Hoeven Collection" Opened at Northwestern College

The "Congressman Hoeven Collection" has recently been officially opened at Ramaker Library. The government documents, books and citations which are housed in the Hoeven Room reflect the many years of public service of Charles B. Hoeven, recently retired U.S. Congressman from Alton, Iowa. Congressman Hoeven's period of consecutive service in the U.S. Congress extended through twenty-two years. During his years of representing Iowa's Sixth District in Washington, he received many citations for distinctive accomplishments. Most of these documents are on display in the room located at the east end of the mezzanine in Ramaker Library.

The foundation of the collection is the wall of books accumulated by a working official in government. Approximately five hundred of these are in the library, basically books of government and history, but also many volumes on agriculture and its related fields of study. The congressman was an enthusiastic member of the House Committee on Agriculture.

Over and above such basic tools as the Congressional Directory and the Congressional Record for the 78th Congress, there are important sets such as The Writings of Washington, edited by John C. Fitzpatrick, The Collection of Works of Lincoln, edited by Roy P. Basler, The History of World War I by Francis Whitling Halsey, Public Papers of the Presidents (Truman, Eisenhower, and Kennedy) compiled by the U.S. Government Printing Office, and The United Netherlands by John L. Motley. Of current interest is the Warren report on the assassination of President Kennedy. There are many other works on biographical subjects, Queen Elizabeth, Catherine the Great, General Grant, Thomas Jefferson, and Henry VIII, as well as works on the analysis of communism.

It is expected that from time to time Mr. Hoeven will add to the books on history and government on display.

At the center of the room stand the desk and chair that the retiring congressman had used in Washington. He purchased them for a definite link to the life which he led. Because of his long service, Congressman Hoeven had several opportunities when the Republicans were in the majority to wield the gavel before the House of Representatives. Former Speaker Joe Martin autographed these gavels as mementos. The flags which stood in his office, flags of the United States and of the State of Iowa, also bring dignity to the new Hoeven Room.

Remembrances from the last three presidents of the United States give the visitor impressions of movement in history and changes in the party in power. An autographed picture of Dwight D. Eisenhower is testimony to the friendship of the most recent Republican occupant of the White House for the congressman from Iowa. From the administration of John F. Kennedy is a pen he used to sign the Omnibus Farm Bill. A gift pencil came from Lyndon B. Johnson, although the gift was made during his term as Vice-President of the United States. There are also letters addressed to the congressman from Eisenhower, Vice-President Nixon and Speakers Martin and McCormack.

Souvenirs of Charles B. Hoeven's trips overseas are among the intriguing items of the collection. In a visit to the Netherlands he arranged for a copy of the Hoeven Family Coat of Arms from Gelderland. Princess Juliana, later to become the queen, signed a certificate and plaque of appreciation from the Netherlands Red Cross. A London souvenir is a silver-plated platter from the Interparliamentary Union. His visit to the Vatican, during the time when Pius XII was Pope, is remembered by a religious medal. To make his South American trip in 1955 unforgettable, he has kept a detailed map of his travels.

His Republican colleagues are present also in spirit. A picture of the party leadership taken at the White House, a plaque from the 1964 national convention, and a Watchdog of the Treasury award from the National Association of Business Men are good evidence of his unchanged political affiliation.

The citizens he represented expressed their appreciation in many tangible ways: keys to the city of Sioux City, a pen set from Emmet County, an appreciation award from the Iowa Chamber of Commerce, a resolution of appreciation from the Sixth District Republican Central Committee, a street named after him in Sioux City, and a desk set from the Chamber of Commerce of Sioux City.

Recognition came also from the universities and colleges of the state. The State University of Iowa awarded him its Certificate of Accomplishment. Our own Northwestern presented him with a Distinguished Service Citation at the last commencement, and Westmar College bestowed the honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

The most personal items, representing three milestones in his life, are (1) a picture of Mr. Hoeven as a doughboy in France, together with his medals; (2) an oil portrait of the Congressman by a Greek artist; and (3) the original of a cartoon by Pletcher in the Sioux City Journal at the time of the announcement of his retirement from office.

Dr. Preston J. Stegenga has stated that Congressman Hoeven's collection will be available for research study of college students and professors interested in political science. Moreover, Mr. Hoeven will be available to lecture to various government classes at Northwestern. Dr. Stegenga mentioned that "Northwestern College is indeed fortunate to have the Congressman Hoeven Collection on our campus."

The alumni and friends of Northwestern are invited to visit the collection whenever Ramaker Library is open, and particularly on their visit to the campus for the commencement activities.
